HAY FEVER.

As certain as the migration of the caribou across the barren lands is the excursion of the world's hay fever sufferers who now move toward their fall retreats. Goldenrod and rag-weed are their enemies. Laden with the impediments of warfare against it, this poor, miserable army of red-nosed and watery-eyed humans hies itself away to the supposedly immune spots to await the coming of the "first frosts."

Victims fear it almost as much as death. Many say they can tell the exact day, the exact hour, the first paroxysm will appear. They prepare for it with the certainty that the condemned man prepares for death. They are disappointed if they miss it by an hour in their prophecy.

At the lake resorts or in the mountain camps, where these fellow sufferers congregate each year, these experts on diagnosis, knowing their own cases so well, spend much time on the porch chairs, elucidating to the rest of the clan on the symptoms.

For 350 years medical men and scientists have been writing fat books about hay fever. Twenty-nine synonyms in the English language have been used for it. The disease was known in the sixteenth century. Botallus, in 1656, reported a case. Van Helmont and Binninger, in the seventeenth century, speak of it. King George IV was a royal sufferer.

Folks talk a lot about it. But they haven't discovered a cure for it. What helps one fellow doesn't touch another. Maybe it's just as well. Hay fever is a good leveler and brings the high and mighty down to the common folks. And if anyone discovered a cure for it there would be little business for the summer hotels in the latter part of the season, for that's when the "sneezers" are at their best, or worst.

THE FEAR OF FREEDOM.

It was Tolstoi who said that the rich would do anything for the poor except to get off their backs.

Similarly, there are various disciples of democracy today who will do anything in the world to further democracy, except to allow us democracy.

Among these is a facile writer in the Chicago News of August 10, who proposes to curtail free speech, whenever it attacks free speech in others, leaving it to "the others," of course, to determine when this attack occurs.

Owing to the curious twist of the mind which always accompanies reactionary reasoning, no matter how well meant, the writer does not see that in thus advocating the curtailment of free speech, he himself is subject to the penalty of his own law, and any who enforced it upon him would in turn be subject thereto, so that the last vestige of free speech would very shortly disappear, by reason of the well-meant attempts to preserve free speech by suppressing free speech.

Have done with all such ingenious evasions.

Quit being ashamed of freedom.

Cease puerile fears that the fundamentals of the American republic are so frail that a few hare-brained fanatics can destroy them by a breath.

Free speech needs no apology or defense, as long as free speech exists; and all free institutions are predicated upon the right of free speech.

Not upon its sup-pression.

But upon its ex-pression.

FOR A CLEAN CAMPAIGN.

Let us hope the worthy resolve of the Republican campaign managers, to keep the campaign on a high plane, free from bombast and mud slinging, will be lived up to.

In a statement made on Friday, Harry M. Daugherty, a member of the Republican executive committee, declared:

"A campaign at all times must be in harmony with the candidate and the cause. As far as the plans of the Republican party are concerned they will go on in orderly fashion as laid out from time to time by Chairman Hays and the committee in conference with the candidate. Nothing will be done in connection with the Republican campaign or omitted to be done, because any particular thing has been done, or omitted to be done by the opposition.

"I think I can safely say that the American people must not expect a campaign of bombast to be conducted by, or in behalf of, the Republican candidate or party. A campaign of personalities may not be expected, nor a campaign which appeals to prejudice; but rather a campaign of dignity, entirely appropriate, and in harmony with the dignity of the candidate and the position to which he aspires."

There have been presidential campaigns not up to that standard. When Cleveland and Blaine were running, no calumny was too foul, no attack too bitter to find public expression. It was a national disgrace, and neither party, in our opinion, profited by the dishonorable tactics.

Our presidential campaigns should be free from vicious personalities or appeals to extreme prejudice.

CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT.

Parts of our election law on corrupt practices are somewhat beclouded. In requiring candidates for office to file affidavits of expenditures, the law says:

"The term 'candidate' shall mean and include every person for whom it is contemplated or desired that votes be cast at any political convention, primary or election, and who either tacitly or expressly consents to be considered so, except candidates for president and vice president of the United States."

A man may consider himself a candidate and no one else have any thought of him. Or a more modest fellow may go his way, all unconscious of his importance, and suddenly discover he is a candidate. Both should be aware of their candidacy and file affidavits, according to the laws.

The law reads as though every person who even prospectively is a candidate, or is mentioned as a candidate and does not make denial of that candidacy, should file a report. A reasonable construction would be:

Every person actively a candidate for office should file a report of his expenditures.

The altruistic content of the world seems to have been reduced to less than half of one per cent.

Ventilation doesn't help much at this season of the year when so much hot air is in circulation.

Mr. Wadsworth was driving slowly west on Forest street and was waiting for another automobile to drive by so he could turn around. As he came opposite the Gidney blacksmith shop the child darted out in front of the car, which could not avoid hitting the boy.

Mr. Wadsworth sprang out of the car without waiting to shut off the power and permitted the machine to continue down the street while he picked up the baby and rushed it across the street to the Pearce hospital, where its injuries were attended to.

Eight States Represented at Sessions Held at Hotel Utah

SALT LAKE, Aug. 21.—Cooperation in common interests of producer and consumer which will result in benefiting industrial conditions, was discussed at the convention of the American Farm Bureau held at the Hotel Utah yesterday.

Representatives from Utah, Idaho, Colorado, Montana, California, Arizona, Nevada and Wyoming were present at the sessions.

The problems that affect the western states and the mission of the farm bureau in advancing agricultural interests formed the topic of several of the addresses delivered. Agriculture, it was stated, has reached the point in relation with other industries where a more rapid advancement is necessary if production is to pick up to the necessary plane and to this end it was urged that the farmers and agricultural workers effect more and stronger organizations, particularly between the state, for the development of a common agricultural spirit.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

John E. Burton, of Boxelder county, a member of the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who presided as chairman at the session, delivered the address of welcome, commenting on the cosmopolitan character of the assembly and urging a greater familiarity with the problems in the different states.

At the roll call taken by Mr. Burton it was shown that the greatest number of representatives were from Utah although a large number were present from Idaho.

MCKAY SPEAKS.

D. D. McKay, president of the Utah State Farm Bureau, declared that Utah was one of the first states to organize on a farm bureau basis and pointed out that agricultural problems now before the country were those of marketing, education and proper legislation. He declared that the west could hope for great agricultural expansion in the future.

Greater familiarity in the work of the western states was urged by W. H. Hellemann, secretary of the California farm bureau.

"At the present the western states do not know each other," he said. "There is teamwork in the middle west and east and this too must be acquired by us in the west and it is to be hoped that the initial acquaintance will be brought about at this convention."

Mr. Hellemann declared that the extension work of the agricultural bureau is invaluable to the farm bureau and that the work must be maintained and supported.

WONDERFUL FUTURE.

"I can see a wonderful future for the farmers and agricultural workers in the western states. We have just country and the west is the country of the future."

From day to day are never even thought of in the east. Let us build a farm bureau of the western states that will serve the agricultural interests to the utmost limit."

Board of Pardons Passes on Petitions

SALT LAKE, Aug. 21.—Decision on the application of Harley Mewhinney, convicted of murder, for a commutation of sentence will not be made by the board of pardons until the September meeting. The case was yesterday continued for consideration at that time. Mewhinney is serving a life sentence for the murder of C. L. Erickson, October 6, 1916.

Records of the case show that Mewhinney followed a couple from the center of town to a rooming house at Second and Second East streets on the night of the crime. He entered the rooming house and attempted to hold them up.

Erickson, who was in another room heard the victims of the hold-up call for help and rushed to the scene. Mewhinney was just leaving the room at the time, and Erickson being in his way, he shot and killed him. Mewhinney was arrested soon after and at his trial it was shown that he was under the influence of drugs when the crime was committed. Because of this fact the jury recommended clemency and a life sentence was imposed.

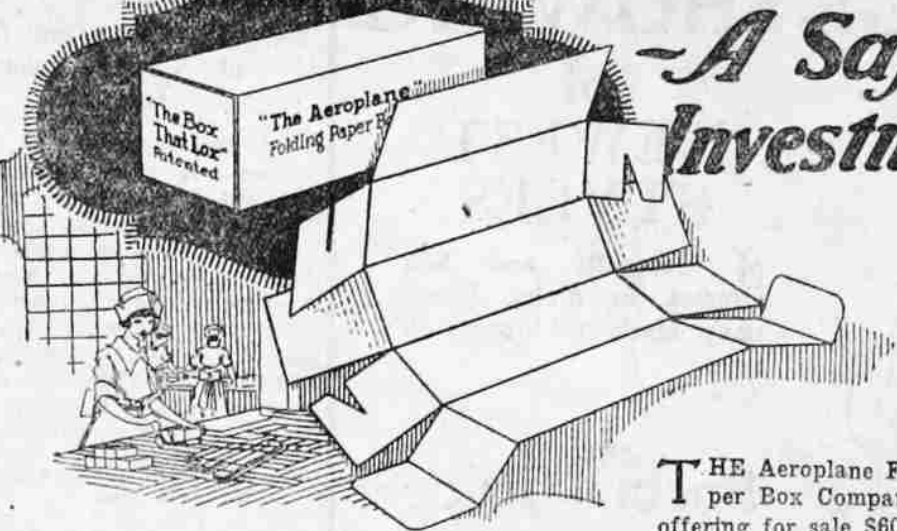

Mewhinney is said to have learned the art of photography since at least he was committed to the state prison and has charge of the prison rogues' gallery. If liberated he expects to make photography his life's work. His mother has been in Salt Lake working for her son's liberation for the past two weeks.

Among the other cases coming before the state board of pardons today were the following with the disposition made of them:

John Carlson Davis, second degree murder, application denied; Joseph H. Taylor, statutory offense, denied; William Peterson, grand larceny, paroled; Alexander Harris, assault with a deadly weapon, paroled; H. W. Hart, carnal knowledge, terminated.
